California law frequently changes, and it can be hard for employers to keep up. But with so much focus on the laws that are newly enacted, employers often forget laws that have been around for a while. Frequently, employers are not complying with those laws, and are subject to unexpected disastrous consequences. In this session, you'll learn about 10 areas of labor and employment law that you might have forgotten about, or maybe never even knew about, including issues related to union access, CalPERS, harassment, discipline, and more.
